

IHACPA's role in aged care

Our role in aged care

The Independent Health and Aged Care Pricing Authority (IHACPA) is an independent government agency. We provide evidence-based pricing and costing advice to the Australian Government on health and aged care services.

Our role in aged care is to provide expert residential aged care, residential respite care and in-home aged care pricing and costing advice that reflects the costs of delivering care. We provide this advice to the Minister for Health and Ageing. It is the government who then determines and announces the prices for aged care services.

IHACPA is also responsible for assessing applications for higher maximum accommodation payment amounts and extra service fees for residential aged care.

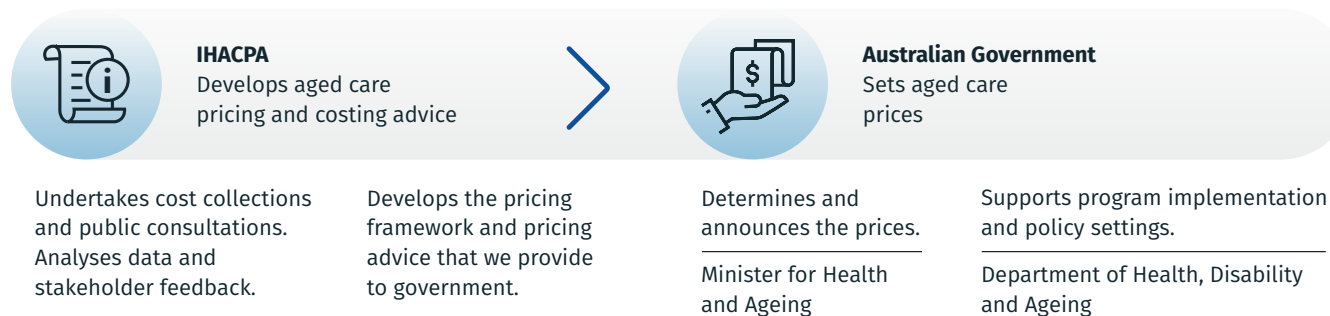

We deliver our annual program of work through public consultation and collaboration with our stakeholders, including:

- Australian Government, state and territory governments
- advisory committees and working groups
- technical experts and clinicians
- aged care sector
- aged care participants and their families, carers and representatives
- the public.

Our vision is for all Australians to have fair access to transparent, sustainable and high-quality health and aged care.

Aged care pricing roles and responsibilities

IHACPA's role in aged care

How we engage with you

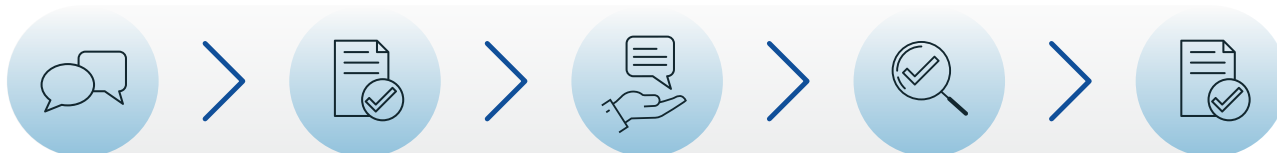

We engage widely to ensure the approach for developing our pricing and costing advice meets the needs of older Australians and the aged care sector.

As part of our annual public consultations, you can share your views and experience on what is important in the pricing frameworks for aged care services. You can also tell us about any future improvements you want to see.

We then use this feedback, along with evidence and data, to help develop our aged care pricing and costing advice to government.
